Scope and Content Notes

The June P. Shelton Papers (T.T.U. RG:40) consists of .45 linear feet of publications, reports, public documents and oral history interviews as well as a copy of a research paper. This collection spans the years 1940-1991.

The significance of this collection lies in the subject matter. There exists no history of the contributions of women to the growth and development of Tennessee Tech University outside of this research project.

Of particular interest are the oral histories. Included are the recollections of a staff member who as a student and librarian has been a part of the university community for 50 years. Also included are the reminiscences of the first woman to receive a Ph.D. from T.T.U and a female athlete. One oral history remains restricted until 2011.

This collection provides valuable insight into an overlooked group whose contributions have been of much importance to the university. Women have more often than not been indians rather than chiefs at Tennessee Tech, but without the contributions of women, the quality of the university would have suffered greatly.
